Canandaigua Academic and Career Center Program Dedication

From Jeanie Grimm: Thank you, everyone, for being here tonight. I have to do this from the podium because I was afraid Lynne would slap me upside the head for this as she has been saying for quite some time that she doesn't want any fanfare around her retirement. But when you are talking about one of the greatest leaders, someone of remarkable vision and courage, someone who has probably done something special for every single person in this room, maybe even in this district, someone whose 3rd love of her life, following her adored husband and beloved daughter and son in law, is the Canandaigua City School District, you know you are getting something. So, Lynne, we are officially dedicating, with this plaque, the athletic project's largest pile of dirt behind the Academy to you.

In August, Mike McClain came to Deb and me and pitched an idea – what if each unit within our district adopted Lynne for a month and celebrated her every single day? Since Opening Day, on almost a daily basis, Lynne has received notes of thanks and small gifts to recognize in any small measure the immeasurable gift of leadership and friendship she has given to us. January was the Board of Education's month. As our final January gift to Lynne, we would like to do the following.

Lead and inspire a community of learners to fulfill their academic and creative potential

Lynne is a champion of children. She believes deeply that each person, and especially each child, is one great relationship away from beginning to reach their potential. She believes that every child deserves a strong education, one that meets their individual needs, one that creates a safe environment in which they can learn and grow. For many, that happens throughout their K-12 career and peaks in the Academy, a building where her touch is evident in virtually every corner. For some, the schedule and the crowds and traditional nature of its offerings put success, and the satisfaction and self esteem that grow from that, out of reach. For this reason, for the kids that she knew, more than they did, could be successful when placed in the right environment, she created the now Canandaigua Academic and Career Center, which began its remarkable journey in the little brick house near the Academy as the Possibilities Center. Seven years ago, when it transitioned to the VA, this successful and forward thinking program begged a new name and thus was born the C-A-C-C or, as John Polimeni called it, in recognition of Lynne's founding of it, the C-A-C-C-LE, or the "CACCLE".

At the CACC, faculty and staff unite to support kids in the most tangible, powerful ways imaginable. Structure, support, and guidance, in its now beautifully renovated building, thanks to the expertise and dedication of Mike McClain's and Dan Bowman's staffs, are abundant. Kids learn traditional academic skills and many life skills, in a relationship based environment of high expectations, individualized approaches, and loving care. Sometimes fragile, sometimes disenfranchised, sometimes just out of synch with a traditional school system, the students of the CACC go to class, participate in internships, plant and tend gardens, design and build picnic benches, enjoy Thanksgiving dinner, and develop the social skills and confidence needed to be successful in college and career – and in life.

Initial Approval

Upon a motion made by Mr. Polimeni, seconded by Mr. Reho, with all present voting yes, the Board of Education gave initial approval for the naming of the CACC program to the Lynne Erdle Canandaigua Academic and Career Center Program.

Lynne H. Erdle dedicated her teaching and administrative career to the proposition that all children and teens must be afforded the educational setting that allows them the best opportunity to succeed to their highest potential and provides a classroom experience that gives them hope for their futures.

This program embodies those educational ideas. Mrs. Erdle is a champion of flexibility of services, opportunity, responsibility, and caring commitment to every student, no matter their situation in life or readily apparent academic needs.

Her unrelenting devotion to this mission and manifest love for young people at each step of her extraordinary career establishes her as one of the foremost educational leaders in the history of the Canandaigua City School District.
